

Objectives of the Walkerton Agricultural Society

Agriculture Societies have been an important part of Ontario's culture and heritage. In the early days of the society, the mandate was to improve livestock and produce through competition. Today's objective is to educate the urban community about all facets of agriculture and rural life. The purposes of the society are in accordance with the objects stated in the Agricultural and Horticultural Organizations Act, which states:

'...The objects of a Society shall be to encourage an awareness of agriculture generally and to promote improvements in the life skills and quality of life of persons living in the agricultural community...'
